NEW PRIESTS BEGIN MINISTRY

Barry Hudock. Father Gregory Kirsch holds a prayer book for the bishop. The ordinations bring the number of active diocesan and religious priests in the diocese to 225. See more coverage on Pages 6-7.

Bishop Donald Trautman and Fr. Barry Hudock would feature prominently in the grand jury report.

#2. Retained Consultant (2019-2021) throughout the New York Child Victims Act lookback window.

Our Consultant

James G. Faluszczyk

James G. Faluszczyk, 50, who is not a member of the bar, is a nationally known, internationally quoted Catholic Church whistleblower. A former 18-year parish priest, as a teenager Faluszczyk was sexually assaulted for three consecutive years by his parish priest. He consults with Phillips & Paolicelli, LLP, helping the attorneys in our firm and clients who are adult survivors of child sexual abuse as they seek justice in New York and New Jersey.

Raised in Erie, Pennsylvania, and living two blocks from the church whose priest abused him, Faluszczyk graduated from Christ the King Seminary in Buffalo, New York. He was called to the priesthood in spite of the abuse he suffered. As a priest, Faluszczyk encountered his first iconoclastic experience with church hierarchy when he disclosed his abuse as a teenager to then Bishop of Erie in 2010 and again later to his successor in 2014. Neither took any action. Later, Faluszczyk learned that the priest had already been restricted from the ministry during the time he abused Faluszczyk.

After ordination, Faluszczyk spent his years as a priest in the Diocese of Erie, before quitting in 2014 to become the frequently interviewed and quoted whistleblower he is today.

Childhood Victim Himself

Like many victims of childhood sexual assault, in adulthood Faluszczyk self-medicated, as he suffered from tremors, panic attacks and, as he described it, "debilitating anxiety." All around him he was revolted by the "secret lifestyles of diocesan priests and the culture in which they are formed," he said. "The church enables sub-cultural behaviors," he added.

"For 20 some years I suffered with this alone," he told WBEN television news in Buffalo, New York. His alcohol abuse is now well under control, he said, adding that he suspects that "most dioceses have a problem of this same nature." Once sober, he told this station in another interview, "I found it nearly impossible to function with all these constant reminders [of my abuse]."

Pennsylvania Grand Jury Report

In Pennsylvania, Faluszczyk testified before a special grand jury that, in August 2018, ended a two-year investigation naming more than 300 Catholic priests in six Keystone State dioceses who sexually abused children over more than six decades, and how their actions were covered up.

Today, Faluszczyk continues to speak out and demonstrate against church abusers and the church culture. In his law firm affiliation with Phillips & Paolicelli, LLP, he helps coordinate intake and contact with clients who are adult survivors of child sex assault, and maintains contact with Catholics and attorneys in the Erie, Pennsylvania and Buffalo, New York areas.

Call Phillips & Paolicelli 1-877-8-ABUSED (877-822-8733)

Survivors of child sex assault can call Phillips & Paolicelli, LLP's dedicated toll-free number at 1-877-8-Abused (822-8733) between 8 AM and midnight on weekdays to speak confidentially with a firm lawyer (not an operator). Depending upon case needs, a client could at some point speak with or meet with Faluszczyk at one of our law offices.

From the Official Catholic Directory, the publicly discoverable record of the intersection of disgraced Cardinal Theodore McCarrick and the noteworthy New York priest he lived with, whom Cardinal John O'Connor later asked to investigate McCarrick.

Example of an APA citation format for purposes of legal research or filing:

Hanline, C. J. (Ed.). (1988). The Official Catholic Directory (p. 293). P.J. Kenedy & Sons.
My annotations follow like this, in this case, a 1988 notation in the Official Catholic Directory for St. Joseph Church, Oil City PA of Fr. Jan C. Olowin, Pastor, and faux-religious "Bro." Scott J. Kastel, Pastoral Associate, who lived together on church property in this time period.

Based on my sworn testimony before the 40th PA Investigating Grand Jury, here is part of a primer I offer those investigating clergy sexual abuse in the Catholic Church:

In summary, there are eight (8) types of files worthy of discovery in court or by law enforcement that pertain to every diocese. These include:

- Personnel Files, Seminary Files, Case Files/Summaries, Safe Environment files, National Directives, Personal Files of chancery staff, General Archive files, and Secret Archive files.

Diocesan personnel subject to inquiry:

- Bishops, Vicar(s)-General, Chancellor, Vice-Chancellor(s), Priest Personnel Director, Diocesan Archivist, Bishop's Priest Secretary, Child Protection Board, and lay secretaries supporting these offices. Historical office holders must be questioned.

Obstacles to obtaining these files, in all cases, include:

- Diplomatic Immunity, Primacy of Canon Law, Pontifical Secret, Mental Reservation, and Destruction of Documents (which is mandated by Canon Law).

When deposing witnesses it is imperative that agents/investigators have command of both the types of Church documents governing these matters and the established protocols for keeping them from civil authorities.

My relational assignment history of Cardinal Theodore McCarrick shows his associations with other bishops, and the influence he wielded on that level. My research also shows that McCarrick lived with the psychologist priest tasked to investigate him, a detail heretofore not examined or reported.

Calling attention to the whereabouts and current activity of alleged abusers is often an outcome of my work. In this case, my classmate continues to find work with noted Catholic authors, and their publishing houses, even though they are aware of the very public allegations against him.

WHAT: Discussion of allegations of coverup in Newark, and Buffalo; discussion of similar coverup by Scharfenberger in Brooklyn, Albany, and Buffalo.

WHEN: Tuesday, December 10, 2019 at 10:00 AM

WHERE: On the public sidewalk in front of 310 Prospect Park West (19th Street Entrance)

WHO: Victim advocate James Faluszczyk, Phillips & Paolicelli Law Firm, on behalf of the victims in New York and New Jersey.

BROOKLYN, NY. Tuesday, December 10, 2019. James Faluszczyk, a former priest and whistleblower, and Daniel Woodard, a former priest and whistleblower, will address the continuing coverup of sexual abuse by Bishops DiMarzio and Scharfenberger. Faluszczyk, a former priest of the Diocese of Albany, and Woodard, a former priest of the Diocese of Buffalo, have spoken fully of their knowledge of alleged coverup by Bishop Hubbard of Albany or recently resigned Bishop Scharfenberger of Buffalo.

To date, under both their watches, the coverup of the avoidable tragedy of clergy sexual abuse continues. Both continue to manage internal Church procedures which protect perpetrators because of the confessional secrecy which they enforce on behalf of the Church.

 Potentially breaking news *****

The Diocese of Albany yesterday, in response to our presser, publicly acknowledged that Bishop Howard Hubbard is being investigated NOT in the Diocese of Albany, but by Cardinal Dolan, the METROPOLITAN Archbishop of New York. He is the Metropolitan of every diocese in the state of New York. This means we forced a response by Albany, and gave first evidence of a Vos Estis Vatican investigation in New York. "Vos Estis" is part of the Latin name of the policy Pope Francis promulgated after the Papal Summit in February: "You are the light of the world", in reference to children, especially victims of clergy sex abuse. The investigation envisioned by this directive is at play in Albany.
